ATA Engaged as Service Provider of Computer-Based National Unified Certified Public Accountants Exam

Over 1.3 Million CPA Exams Administered in 2011

Beijing, China, July 26, 2012 — ATA Inc. (“ATA” or the “Company”, Nasdaq: ATAI), a leading provider of computer-based testing and testing-related services in China, today announced that the Chinese Institute of Certified Public Accountants (“CICPA”) has engaged ATA to be its service provider for the computer-based National Unified Certified Public Accountants (CPA) Exam in 2012.

The CPA exam has been administered for more than 20 years in China. Because of its credibility and high standard, the CPA exam is one of the most highly regarded national exams in China. These exams are offered once a year with two sessions, i.e. the professional and comprehensive sessions. In 2011, over 1.3 million CPA exams were administered, with more than 550,000 test takers registered for the professional session of the paper-based CPA exam and around 7,000 registered for the comprehensive session. The largest volume for a single CPA exam subject was approximately 400,000 tests, administered in over 10,000 test centers throughout China. As a result of the exam’s widespread influence, the CICPA has placed a significant focus on ensuring that the CPA exam is as fair and secure as possible to all test takers.

The national unified CPA exam is a unique method of CPA selection in China. The CPA Examination Committee, which is overseen by the Ministry of Finance of the People’s Republic of China, has full responsibility for the organization of the CPA exam, while the testing office of the CICPA is responsible for the execution of the CPA exam.

The CICPA believes administering the national unified CPA exam using a computer-based platform is a significant step forward for the “CPA Examination Policy Reform Program,” which aims to enhance examination quality and organization.

Mr. Kevin Ma, ATA’s Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, stated, “ATA’s proprietary, scalable test delivery technologies provide our clients with large-scale testing capabilities that are stable, secure and efficient. We are extremely pleased to be embarking on this relationship with the highly regarded Chinese Institute of Certified Public Accountants. We believe that the body’s engagement with ATA further validates our position as the leader in computer-based testing services in China. With our core competencies in technology, operations, security, and quality service, we look forward to begin administering the ‘2012 National Unified Computer-Based CPA Exam,’ which will be the first computer-based CPA exam and a significant milestone for China’s computer-based testing service industry.”
